

The arrangements were in charge of the Social Committee of the city, composed of Dean Hart, Mrs. Fred Brandebler, Mrs. John Johnson, Marie Gahr, Mrs. Carl Gunn, Augusta Wright, and Marie Mrs. A. J. Decker, and the South Dakota Co. passed out the wedding cake at a very short notice.

MUNICIPAL UNIVERSITY

At last the University of Omaha has achieved its end—or rather its beginning. Municipality is finally assured. We know that the long years of building this institution, the intensive campaign to give it city support, and the several court cases necessary to prove the legality of civic ownership have not been in vain.

Next month this great, though undoubtedly quiet, change in control takes place. We appreciate the manner in which our present board has loyally given of time and money. But the incoming officers will have financial means that signify not merely continued existence but progress that has long been only a fond dream to those in charge of the school.

The Judge's decision coming just before the holidays, was the best possible Christmas present for this institution, for the faculty, and for the students who depend upon it for their education. Our new year, new both by the calendar and in the college administration, holds possibilities much greater than those which have previously confronted us.

It is the privilege of the student body to assist the tax payers and the Board in making the first year under municipal control an outstanding year. Our next task is to prove, through scholarships, through activities, and most of all, through school loyalty, that we appreciate and are worthy of the interest the citizens of Omaha and all Nebraska are showing in our University.

"Early to bed and early to rise," and you miss the best time of the day.

BOOST OUR TEAMS

This paper has repeatedly compared the University of Omaha to a beautiful maiden, who was defended in many and varied battles by her courageous knight, the athletic team. Once again this metaphor holds true as the basketball season gets well under way. There is, however, one grave difference, for who ever heard of the bravest knight winning a joust without his fair lady being at the arena side, or at least from some balcony watching the fray. Despite classical customs, our valiant knight of the basketball team battles on without the Lady University showing any but the mildest interest.

Our comparison does not hold so well for the girls team, The Amazons, best known female fighters, who were more noted for physical powers than for beauty, so it would certainly be untrue to point out any similarity between our young women and the Amazons. The fact remains, nevertheless, that they, as well as the men, need our support which they are only partially receiving.

If you, and we, and a hundred or so more, even a mediocre team could win. Our two fine groups will make their opponents show the very short end of a real score, if we do our part.

As long as that which might have been, isn't, why worry your head about it.

The sad mistakes of yesterday can be buried and forgotten by the good deeds of today.

FINAL EXAMS

Here we were, gay, merry little creatures, blithely going about our menial tasks when suddenly! Smash! Bang! Squash!—down plumped final exams on our carefree young shoulders.

What unsuspecting, "would be" innocents we are! We like to pretend that exams just creep up behind us, from somewhere. We have no idea that they are so close until they pounce upon us and drag us down.

And yet all the while we know that they were coming and all the while we kept putting the thought away to be considered at some future date and now, and now—it's almost too late.

True repentance combined with more or less intensive study, really more, are great aids to the luckless individual whose conscience is barking him mercilessly and whose "folks at home" will probably do worse.

It is at this time when we'd love to tear limb from limb those "Moses and Mimos" of efficiency who go serenely sailing around preaching "be legends" and lazily pitying us in our sad plight.

But what is this thing that makes us rave and rant, and miserably regretful of our superior fellow man? Why (Oh such questions!) it's "us"—we—ourselves—it's "us" who didn't study—let's say—who kept late hours and indulged in things that were not particularly elevating and helpful to the acquiring of education.

And now it's "us" who are going to have to squirm and sweat through hours of knowledge extracting in torture chambers, but we have nobody but "us" to blame for our condition at this time.

Max No Diff!

After our recent experiences, we now know that Xmas marks the spot where the money was seen last.

And we have a new definition for a civilized nation—one that spends millions unearthing ways to kill men but can't think up a way to care for its unemployed.

A prominent dentist says that the American mouth is becoming larger. We knew that it was unwise to add that last layer to the club sandwich.

And a well-known optician says that reading in street-cars is very bad for the eyes. Especially when the person whose paper you are reading won't sit still.

A certain singing teacher, barred from carrying on his work in a residential zone, maintains that his calling is not a trade, business, or industry. Just another racket, probably.

It may be a weight off the bridegroom's mind to find out that his bride can cook, but after she begins doing it the weight is usually transferred elsewhere.

Conscience began to hurt man about 3,000 B. C., says an archeologist, which probably explains why it shows so much deterioration today.

Please Tell Me!

Dear Cynthia

I have been wanting to write to you for quite a while and unburden myself. I should like to know why I cannot seem to play basketball as well as Benny and Sandy? Please keep this letter very confidential.

Yours,

D. Thompson.

My Dear D.:

I sympathize with you very much, in fact it pleases me to know that you realize your duty as a player on your team. The secret lies in the way you hold your mouth and in how you part your hair. Take a look at Benny's and "go thou and do likewise."

"Cyn."

Dearest Cynthia:

Why, oh why, can't I make people understand how I received the nasty wound on my head?

I think that to have a scar received from playing basketball is an honor, don't you? In fact I think I was the hero of the game.

Your friend,

"Dede" H.

Friend Hills:

With those eyes, exquisite; with those lips, divine; with those nose, immense; and with a heart like yours, how can we believe that basketball gag?

"Cyn."

Dear Cynthia:

I wonder if you have ever been in my position? What is the best thing to do for that thrill I get when an Alpha Sig gets a basket? He's such a star, and well you know.....

Jane Marshall.

Dear Jane:

Yes, I know. My remedy perscription to you is to "hitch your wagon to a star."

"Cyn."

Dear Cynthia:

Have you noticed that Helen Johnson is wearing a fraternity pin? Do you suppose she found it or maybe that it's her father's? It worries me, because I think that when you find a fraternity pin you should advertise the fact in the newspaper in the lost and found column. How shall I find out where she got the pin?

Anxiously,

Mary Clark.

Dear Mary:

I have just discovered that there is a combination bank account at one of the banks downtown and that one of the combination is Helen Johnson. I'm sure I can't figure the mystery out—but then the above may be a clue. Suppose you ask Helen all about the pin.

"Cyn."

COLORS—SOUNDS—SMELLS

Purple shadows on the snow,
 Cast by poplar trees—
 Last radiance of a setting sun,
 Caught by the glowing boughs.
 Misty green of the new-born leaves,
 Obscuring sight down deserted streets.

To these I give my worship.
 Sighing breezes that rustle the leaves
 Of the silver green of the cottonwood trees—
 Whispering patter of rain on the roof,
 Washing our poor world clean as truth.
 The speaking of thunder birds out of the sky,
 Or the eternal song of the spheres—

To these I give my worship.
 The smell of lilacs in the spring,
 A bird's high flung delight;
 The heady fragrance of October winds,
 The lotus' opening in the night.
 The freshening breath of a wind from the sea
 And the wine red roses blowing—
 To these I give my worship.

Book Review

"The Art of Thinking," a late book by Ernest Dimnet, is remarkably clever and out-of-the-ordinary. Although M. Dimnet is a Frenchman, he writes delightful English, and his style is so sparkling and tinged with delicate humor that it makes even the subject of "thought," over which there has been so much haggling and dry discussion, seem fresh and intriguing.

The author himself is most interesting. He is a French abbe, quite advanced in years, and he has certainly wasted none of them. He has published a number of charming books, both in French and English and has attained much recognition in Europe. He is widely read and travelled, and his wide variety of experience gives to his literary work a truly cosmopolitan tone.

Although M. Dimnet's book is very applicable to life, it is far from being a text-book. M. Dimnet's long experience as scholar, writer and preacher, has given him much from which to draw his conclusions, and he surely has set forth a real recipe for becoming as wise and happy as one could possibly desire.

Perhaps one of the most remarkable things about this book on thinking is that it is written for average people. It touches an answering note in every mind, and when the last page is turned, new hopes and ambitions must surely be awake within the reader's mind. M. Dimnet has surely written a book which will be immeasurably helpful to those who are groping in the dark and are not able or have lost the desire to think creatively.

Professor John Dewey says of this book—"I would say to the reader, 'Taste it, try it for yourself. Keep it close at hand, read a page or two, a paragraph, opening at random. Browse about in it; read it consecutively. Keep it to a bedside table and read it to compose your mind at night and to arouse it in the morning. Why? Try and see.'"

Indeed, the book does offer much that is practicable. M. Dimnet suggests that only pleasurable material should be read; that one should repeatedly go over the material which one already knows; that attainment of intellect is not an aim worthy of serious consideration in itself; and that there is high co-relation between thoughtfulness and morality.

This book needs no recommendation and should be read if only for becoming acquainted with the charming personality and philosophy of M's author.

MANY CHANGES IN SPORT PROGRAM

Dunlap Outlines Future of Sports in the Muni Uni

FACING A OPTIMISTIC ERA

The recent Supreme Court decision on the Muni University has changed entirely the outlook of athletics; it has given a new footing. We are seeing the sun rise not the sun set. Our position is similar to the fellow struggling on a section of sand-hill land shooting jack-rabbits suddenly receiving news of an inherited fortune. Immediately his wife wants a new stove; he must have a new bug-gy. The very sun looks different.

Several things enter in to make the basis for these changes. There is a changed attitude on the part of the principals, students, conference officials, everybody toward the institution. This is reflected in the telephone calls and letters. Dean Dunlap is chuckling over the number of good coaches wanting a job with the school. One particular man, who last year said Dean Dunlap was a fool and blind to be fooling with a plan to establish a Muni University, came in last week to see the Dean asking for a job.

Another basis is the co-operation received from outsiders; Barney Burch has granted the University the use of his field at Thirtieth and Wirt for a practice field for the Baseball and Track teams.

Mr. Bradford and Dean Dunlap will coach the two teams in the Spring. Upon Mr. Bradford will fall the main responsibility. Mr. Bradford played professional baseball for a few years. He understands every phase of the game. In track, he ran the 100 yards in just a shadow over 10 seconds. He also took his turn with the weights and the quarter mile.

Dean Dunlap will not be without experience to teach the men when he has the time. In 1905, he ran the 100 yards in 10 flat at Nebraska under Dr. Clapp and the 220 in 22 seconds. His time on the 100 tied the school record. These records were made on dirt tracks, not the fast cinder tracks of today. Dean Dunlap's most outstanding achievement was made in the 120 yard high hurdles. His time was 18.1—an inter-collegiate record. This record was unbeaten and untied for eleven years. In 1916 the record was tied by the late Coach McCandless, coach at York College.

Three years ago Lindell, now a coach, lowered the record by one tenth of a second on the cinder track.

The schedules will be so arranged as to play double headers whenever possible. A track meet in the morning with a baseball game in the afternoon is to be the routine. The purpose of the many changes is to widen the athletic program. The past has been weak, but a beginning. The past teams have simply been forerunners of the ones to be. The present athletic board is laying a foundation for the new board. The school plans to be playing larger schools within three years. This institution is to become University instead of an old folks' home.

With the reduced rates on air transportation the school will be able to send more of its teams by air. The school is following Dean Dunlap's suggestion, "Get a dream, make that dream come true."

REORGANIZE O CLUB

The O Club is to be reorganized. Several of the men who won letters in recent seasons are interested in starting the club again. The present key letter holders will be active members. The older men will all be looked upon as a lifetime membership which is a good thing for admission to the University.

All men interested in baseball and track for the coming season should see Dean Dunlap or Professor Bradford at once. The number of men interested in these sports will largely determine the schedule for the coming year. The number interested and the quality of players interested will determine the teams the school will play in the spring. See either of these two men at once.

MOON MULLINS

By Donald Marshall

Those who read the funny papers know the entertaining abilities of that group of personalities who reside in the household of Emmy Smaltz. First, there is the gandy Emmy herself, who has the means to attract a number of romantic and handsome gentlemen. Some of these men, as Emmy firmly contends, were first struck with her beauty as displayed in a newspaper photo or portrait. Others, so Emmy says, undoubtedly became indirectly acquainted with her charms through such media as reducing machine advertisements or corset photos. Her physical allurements are tremendous, and five marriages attest to her successful thrusts at matrimony.

Then there is shrewd little Kayo, who for his size cannot be duplicated in intelligence or in physical hardness. He can sleep in a dresser drawer or anywhere occasion demands and as to opportune remarks, he is as apt as Will Rogers.

We must not forget Moon Mullins. How could we? He is inimitable and unforgettable. Yet, if we were to judge "Banjo Eyes," we would say that he is careless with his cigar ashes; that he uses deception in his monetary dealings with his friends; and that he is vocationally incompetent because he seldom leaves his employer's mansion in a vertical position but is generally ejected by a butler.

However, Moon cannot be despised by those who view him as he travels the bumpy road of life. Rather, he has our sympathy and sometimes our envy, when we think of his dissatisfied employers, yet he never worries about unemployment or the business depression. Emmy may think him impolite at the table, yet Moon never gives a thought about his next meal or lodging rent. His neighbors may think him far from the goal of citizenship, yet neighbors are sometimes mistaken.

All in all, the interplay of these personalities give to their observers various episodes of humorous moods. And maybe, on further thought, we may see in our own experiences the spice of life contributed by persons who, in manners, somewhat resemble Mr. Moon Mullins or Miss Emmy Smaltz.

Uni Girls' Basketball Teams Win but Few Games During Month

The girls' basketball teams have not been very fortunate in winning their games this year. Of the last four games which the first team played, one game was won from the St. Paul's Methodist team and one game was tied with the Pioneer Air Craft team. This last mentioned team is composed of the girls who played on the University team last year but are out of school this year.

Of the last four games which the second team has played, only one was won. This game was with the Y. W. C. A. team. Esther Weber, who formerly played on the University team and who is now attending Northwestern University, played on the Y. W. team during the Christmas holidays.

Betty Sayles and Betty Curtis, two players of last season, played on the University team during the holidays.

Miss Gloria Kurtz, sponsor, announces that the teams will practice on Monday nights, from 7 to 9 o'clock, in order that practice games may be played.

The results of the last four games for both teams are as follows:

December 13:
Omaha University I, 16; Holy Name, 19.

Omaha University II, 20; Y. W. C. A., 11.

December 20:
Omaha University I, 34; St. Paul's Methodists, 24.

Omaha University II, 11; Nebraska Nurses, 21.

December 27:
Omaha University I, 21; Pioneer Air Craft, 21.

Omaha University II, 5; Caseys, 32.

January 3:
Omaha University I, 15; Omaha Letter Shop, 18.

Omaha University II, 9; Night Hawks, 39.

RULES FOR CHAPERONS IN "SYRACUSE ORANGE"

In a letter to the "Syracuse Daily Orange," Mrs. Margaret Bond Brockway, social advisor of Syracuse University, stresses the obligations undertaken by chaperons at college dances. Mrs. Brockway, speaking for the chancellor, deans and directors of Syracuse University, mentioned the usual appeal for good conduct made to the students by the heads of the university.

The duties of the responsible chaperon were also stated as follows:

Chaperons are expected to arrive at the scheduled starting time and to remain until the orchestra and every guest has left the house.

Chaperons are expected to report any evidence of uses of alcoholic liquor either in or outside the house. Returning alumni must abide by this rule or leave the house.

Chaperons must see that all rooms are adequately lighted.

Second floor rooms are to be used as coat rooms and for serving refreshments at intermission, not as sitting rooms during the dances. Doors of second floor rooms must be kept open at all times. Third floor rooms are not to be used.

Several years ago, recently discovered that their mutual birthdate is August 27, 1909.

SUPREME COURT SANCTIONS MUNICIPAL UNIVERSITY

roots in the past. However, about two years ago, W. F. Baxter, Dr. Shearer, Al Gordon, W. T. Graham and Hugh A. Myers, and others, brought the matter before the state legislature, and obtained a law authorizing the establishment of municipal universities in certain class cities. This plan to establish such a university in Omaha was submitted at the city election last May, and approved by the voters.

Then came an injunction, asked by opposing parties, which sought to prevent the university plans from being carried out. Thus, the high court decision culminates a long fight for the establishment of a municipal university.

Court's Decision

The Supreme Court held that Omaha was ruled by a home-rule charter but added:

"Education in the city of Omaha is not a strictly municipal affair. It is pre-eminently a state affair. The schools, in which are educated the children who are to become in time the directors of our political destinies are of state and not of strictly municipal concern. To have education and intelligent men and women cannot be a strictly local concern. It concerns and affects the whole state.

"The constitutional provision, by which certain cities may adopt a home rule charter does not render invalid legislation which provides such a city may establish and maintain a municipal university.

"In accepting the privilege conferred upon it by such legislation, the city, in providing said educational institution, acts as a political sub-division of the state in a matter of state concern."

The case was argued in the Supreme Court before Justices Goss, Rose, Dean, Good, Thompson, Eberly, and Day. Judge L. B. Day wrote out the decision. Frank H. Woodland and Clinton Brome represented the university, and John Paul Breen the opposition in attacking the plan.

RASSLIN RIPPLES

A new wrinkle in wrestling has been discovered by some of the "Rasslin Club." Those who have ever enjoyed the experience of "Sofa Rasslin," should come out and watch the Club members. They have a system that can't be beat. That accounts for the popularity of the club members among the weaker sex. They just love to be man-handled by such he-men.

Things have been progressing so rapidly that Patrick Quinn, a prominent member of the Club was reported having difficulty keeping members of the fair sex away from him. The use of a club was suggested but Mr. Quinn dislikes the thought of battering in any skulls. He would rather squeeze the victim to death. He says it is a much more humane way of disposing of surplus admiration.

Reports have come in from all over the campus that the sororities have made plans to adopt the "Rasslin Club" and sponsors its movements. However, there is a deeper plot afoot. If the Club is adopted by any of the sororities there will undoubtedly be much friction between the "fems" who lose out and those fortunate members who acquire the unrestricted supervision of those handsome members of that muscle bound crowd.

A word of advice to the boys, "If you would be popular among your girl friends, take up wrestling." They fall for you just like Rome fell for Caesar.

Basketball Schedule

Not a bit disheartened by the loss of early games the Cardinals have turned their eyes on the future games. The Redbirds are due to break into the win column in the next two games. With the feel of victory they should be in a better state of mind to win.

The schedule of the near future is: Norfolk—Friday, Jan. 16, here. Dana—Saturday, Jan. 17, at Blair. Midland—Thursday, Jan. 22, at Fremont.

Peru—Saturday, Jan. 24, at Peru.

Art Notes

Marcella Foster, Ruth Edwards, Grace Harlan, and Mrs. Sunderland were represented in the recent Nebraska Artist Exhibit which occurs annually. The work must pass a jury before it is exhibited, and consists of original work of artists who live in Nebraska or who have resided in Nebraska.

The Normal and Kindergarten art students are making gaily decorative, cut-paper designs. They have modernized castles and flowers, and have created some clever pieces of work.

The advanced students are studying arches in perspective. The drawing class is attempting to get a skeleton for studying bones and construction of the human body.

CARDINALS FAIL TO WIN—IMPROVING

Team Works Hard But Cannot Break Jinx

LOSE CLOSE GAME TO KEARNEY

Returning a week from their Christmas vacation to start intense preparation for Tarkio, the Cardinals worked hard but were defeated 40 to 27. The Redbirds have had considerable trouble with Tarkio this year as in the past. Omaha lost the first game to the Missouri tossers by the score of 43 to 23. The Cardinal defense was not staunch enough to repel the teamwork of the visiting forwards.

Not the least downhearted by the reversal suffered by the hands of Tarkio, the Redbirds met Kearney on our home floor. The result was the best game that has been played this year. Kearney emerged with a 27-26 verdict, but the game throughout was bitterly and evenly fought.

The Redbirds outplayed the visitors cleanly in the last half of the game and scored more field goals during the entire evening than did the Kearney men but nevertheless the result remained the same. Kearney came back from the half with a lead of 13 to 12, and the advantage was nursed along until the game had but five minutes to go. Huff, Hegarty, and Fry had made six points with four passes at the start of the second-half to give warning, and in the waning moments of the contest, the Redbirds let loose with sizzling variety of floor work that put the Kearney coaches on the edge of their chairs and the Omaha fans on their feet.

With the count 27 to 20 against them; Fry got a free throw and Hegarty a field goal. Sandy Armentrout also connected for a field goal. Thompson was next to add two points. The Cardinals were trailing by one point. But here, Coach James sent Graham into the fray with stalling orders. Omaha got possession of the ball but once after this, and Fred Fry missed an attempted shot as the game ended.

Elated over the showing of his men against the formidable Kearney Antelopes, Coach Warren Howard lost no time in preparing his men for their next game with the Nebraska Aggie squad. However the jinx of the season still held and the Omahans were unable to win from the farmers.

This much must be said for the team. They have tried hard. The games played thus far have been the hardest on the schedule. After they once have tasted victory it is hoped they will be hard to stop.
